

Bible Read-Athon

This may work best for junior highers, but who knows—maybe high school students would get into it as well.

It's your basic read-athon concept, but biblicized. Students raise money for Speed the Light by collecting donations from friends and family who pledge either a flat donation per book read or a certain amount of money for each chapter the student reads. Hey, this is a great chance to promote campus missions and the FIRE BIBLE: Student Edition too!

Students who participate can be treated to free pizza for their accomplishment at a celebration lunch.

Youth pastors can work their sermons into the challenge as well, by asking the students to focus on a certain book or books of the Bible.

Check out the forms and handouts below to get your youth group started on their very own Bible Read-athon.
